SOA Legacy—Community

and an open mike writer's reception with author B.J. Hollars hosting at ArtStart.

Much was gained in Rhineland District Library's collaboration with ArtStart

- Learning marketing techniques
 - ArtStart uses cutting edge event apps to drive people to their programming
 - RDL was more visible in old school media like television appearances and articles
 - Successful webpages and social media presence created excellent results even as the County Fair was taking place
 - Both put out press releases and flyers/posters using a variety of programs like Canva
- Grantwriting styles—each complementing the other in editing and budgets
- and building a new brand and successful series of programs.

ARTS
LEGACY PROGRAM

Collaboration Growing Pains

A small group, but a mighty one!

- The first class was only 10 in number.
- Estimates were between 25-50, and
- All SOA programs in all media are concurrent in 2018

Web and printed materials were not consistent between collaborative partners

- ArtStart hosted the initial SOA site on its page, making programming and registration difficult to find
- Student scholarships, provided through ArtStart were not advertised well to RDL or others
- Changes were frequently made by one partner without discussion
- Not all sponsors were initially on all materials

...And about that intern

Efforts were made to secure an intern. RDL had difficulty attracting an individual to the Northwoods. Without housing included, and with the shortened timeline to get the word out, even a paid internship wasn't practical for most students.

An current library page (an elementary education major) wages were increased to assist with preparing for the programs, program set up, and RDLs additional open hours for School of the Arts.

Rhineland High School Key Club members also assisted as runners between the two facilities and during public events as well

CHANGES!

- With a whole year to plan a new Logo for SOA is under design
- A separate website for SOA is under construction
- More SOA Programs will be available for the general public, including author events, artists demonstrations, a mini film festival, and writer how to's both at ArtStart and RDL
- Feedback from instructors and participants indicated 2018s program would be best as an extended weekend encompassing all art mediums. September 27-30, 2018.
- SOA classes will be available ala carte to make them more affordable to student participants

Sincere Thanks!

Again, the Rhinelander District Library and Art Start sincerely thank you, the WVLS BOT for this fantastic opportunity to collaborate and return this program in a new incarnation to the area. RDL has continued its collaboration with ArtStart in 2018, not only on SOA Legacy, but several other programs as well, including author events and film screenings.

Please watch for upcoming programs for the 2018 School of the Arts Legacy Programs— a future made possible with WVLS' inaugural contribution!
