

Physical Labeling of Items

In order to facilitate the check-in process and make it possible for libraries to efficiently and accurately determine how many pieces should be included in the item before checking it in, the following was approved:

1. For audiobooks and video recordings (e.g. DVD sets, books on CD) in a package whose exact number cannot be easily determined from the packaging, there will be an easily visible label noting the number of discs/booklets, etc. in the package.
2. For a print item which includes a disc, an easily seen label will be placed on the outside of the item to note that it should be checked for a CD or CD-ROM.
3. The ownership/barcode of an item should be obvious from its exterior.

The committee members noted that it is far preferable to note these characteristics while physically inspecting items before they are scanned, so that check-in messages on an item record are unnecessary and only make the check-in process less efficient.

Marking Items with Multiple Pieces:

If a library does not label their materials as noted above, they cannot hold either the lending library or any patron responsible for missing pieces.
